NIIM and its founder, Professor Avni Sali aim to bring together teaching, research and the clinical practice of Integrative Medicine (IM) with the objectives of facilitating improved understanding of the utilisation, safety and limitations, evaluation and development of evidence-based Integrative Medicine. NIIM seeks to:

1. Establish quality teaching programs for medical professionals and other allied health personnel
2. Contribute to and support the development of an education and a research culture in IM which observes the highest ethical standards
3. Facilitate collaborative research into IM drawing on the expertise in IM and research methodology
4. Source funding for IM research and disseminate research findings
5. Disseminate information about IM to those involved in healthcare delivery in all disciplines, researchers, regulatory authorities and the public
6. Establish clinics that will provide Integrative Medicine medical care
7. Continue to build on our existing education and research activities to further enhance our innovation reputation

Further information, including current research projects, are available at www.niim.com.au, or please contact us directly.
